

How can you possibly consider allowing large corporations to dominate and control the flow of information and still call yourselves Americans? After what happened in New York the citizens of this country need accurate and unadulterated information to protect and defend themselves and their loved ones. I've watched this situation of large media corporations gobbling up all media outlets, even small town newspapers here in Wisconsin. It frightens me that bureaucrats like you can only allow the wealthy and powerful to obliterate any chance of Americans to receive honest, accurate news from a wide variety of sources. I've gone out of my way to inform as many people as I can about this rush to control information. I'll continue to do so. Thank God for the internet. For the past five years it's where I've turned to anything like a diverse opinion on any subject. My only consolation in this sad turn of events is that your families, your children and grandchildren will be at the mercy of these same conglomerates. When they start banging the drums to march to war your sons and possibly your daughters will hear their siren's song and happily don a uniform. After all what will stop them? You can be assured there won't be any voice in the media to dissent. There's hardly anyone now who dares to raise a protest against this foolish war we've backed ourselves into. We've come to this pass because of people like the drones at the FCC. What will the future be like when only a handful of people control everything we read, see and hear? Enjoy your moments of obsequious deference to the wealthy and the powerful. Like all families in this country your families will also pay a heavy price because of this thought control. We value diversity in this country unless it's diversity of opinion.
